

Cellphones distract the attention of the flying public. Imagine a charter flight full of students, each armed with their own cellphone. Just trying to gain their attention through the pre-flight briefing by having them turn off their cellphones was a challenge enough. Imagine what it would be like if they all chose to call their families if there was any type of inflight emergency? Who do the young want to talk to when they are afraid and travelling by themselves?